FOOD CITY

Food City locations will offer additional retail space for lease to create new retail centers.

“Huntsville's growth has provided new opportunities to expand our retail offerings, particularly in the grocery sector where some areas are presently underserved,” Shane Davis, Director of Urban and Economic Development said. “Food City has a strong reputation as a quality retailer and being a good community partner. They will be an excellent addition to the Huntsville market. This partnership allows Huntsville to secure all six store locations planned to service the Huntsville-Madison County market. This is a win-win in that we are able to provide new retail opportunities to areas that need better retail options and the new revenues can be invested back into the community for public infrastructure projects.”

Food City is owned by K-VA-T Food Stores, Inc., a privately held family and employee-owned corporation. The Virginia-based retailer has more than 140 stores in Virginia, Kentucky, Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama.

Grocery store amenities include full-service grocery options, custom prime meat and seafood departments, a Starbucks coffee shop, full-service deli and bakery, pharmacy and floral services, and a fuel center in select locations.

Construction on Phase I is expected to start in May with the first store opening this fall.

MAGIC CITY

ASC indicated that the funding was required for them to guarantee the university fixed payment for the four years they required in their proposed contract.

Other major concerns included the lack of transparency of financial statements and supporting documentation of previous MCC events. All funds raised during the MCC weekend including sponsorships, scholarships, and additional municipal funding all go to the ASC. In addition, ASC receives all revenue from all MCC-branded merchandise, the Pep Rally and the parade. Historically, the parade was the major fundraiser for the Magic City Metro Alumni Chapter.

AAMU officials offered compromise proposals and attempted to meet and discuss these concerns with the ASC officials to no avail. The university is very optimistic as it reviews future options. “As a public institution, AAMU has an obligation to ensure that every contractual agreement is fair and in the best interest of our university stakeholders, most importantly our students. Our primary goal moving forward is to ensure that our legal rights, as awarded through our partnership with the City of Birmingham, are preserved.
